Rachel's food is heart-warming. She uses gorgeous ingredients that are used in abundance to create comforting, vibrant meals. Her love of food started when she was very young, sitting in the kitchen with her mother, helping and tasting. Her mother taught her their Scandi family recipes, as well as those she picked up from living in Ireland.

My mom used pickled chili peppers as a basic flavor enhancing ingredient in countless recipes. In Boston during the '50s and '60s chili peppers were considered ethnic foods and were not as widely available in supermarkets as they are today. To an enterprising opportunist like my mother, this never seemed to pose any problem.
